

Permission to PLAY

A Workshop For Creative Women: Writers – Artists – Business Creators – You!

Let your inner child come out to play.

Need to add a little FUN & IMAGINATION to your creative practice? The intent of this workshop is to provide space for participants to spark their creativity. We will lighten up, “think like a kid,” and open to wonder from a fresh perspective with hands-on activities and fun, imaginative writing prompts.

This will be a playful, inquiry-based exploration in a carefully-held space. Expect surprises to arise from this exploration of our playful nature.

Date: Saturday, April 25, 2015

Time: 1-4PM

Location: Poplar Grove Schoolhouse
4638 E. State Road 45, Bloomington

Cost: $40

Registration: This workshop is presented through Women Writing for (a) Change, Bloomington.
To register, please visit www.wfacfb.org

About the facilitator: Kim Evans

Kim is a certified Women Writing for a Change facilitator and Kaizen-Muse creativity coach. She recently finished her first book, What I Gave to the Fire, through the tools and support of these programs. As a facilitator and coach, she holds a space of presence, compassion, and curiosity to help people take small steps through creative challenges into clarity, enjoyment and flow.

Questions? Please email evans.kim@att.net, call 812-360-0879, or visit www.kimevanstudio.com.

The Writing for a Change Foundation of Bloomington focuses on the process of writing to promote personal growth, leadership, deepening creativity, and healthy community building. Writing, inclusive voice and good will are our tools.

*Real Words,
deep listening,
creating community.*